EUROPE FOR ALL!

Is Europe really open to all young people?

Many agendas and declarations presented by European institutions, their funding programmes and organisations working in the field of international volunteering have set up a focus on including young people “with fewer opportunities” into European volunteering activities and in particular on creating more diversity among the target group.

But despite this priority, examinations show that exchange and volunteering programmes are still reaching mostly young people who are from a rather privileged background – and are in general less open to youth “with fewer opportunities”.

The Strategic Partnership “Europe for All” brought together partners from four European countries around the idea of joining efforts to better involve this target group in European voluntary service opportunities – and thus to make the slogan “Europe for All” come true.

The aim was to increase the inclusivity of such programmes by offering tailor-made volunteering activities, developing specific promotion and mentoring strategies, building up regional network approaches and urging the political level for more resources in the field of international youth work. The project was scientifically accompanied in order to examine the conditions for success of the implemented strategies.

Two years later, many of the project goals have been achieved: different volunteering activities, peer approaches and mentoring activities have been conducted between all involved countries, regional networking structures have been set up to get involved in international youth mobility and overall: a newly created network of practitioners and volunteers is willing and dedicated to take further steps together!

The international conference shall provide a platform to share the insights won by the project, to discuss best practice examples, to create new synergies with other actors involved in youth work, youth policies and international volunteering.

We invite everybody to be part and contribute their views and approaches on how to create a “Europe for All”!
